Catherine Buell, Director, Amazon Housing Equity Fund

As Director of Amazon's Housing Equity Fund, Catherine Buell is responsible for long-term and innovative programs that address civic priorities in the communities where Amazon employees live and work. Catherine helped launch and currently oversees Amazon's Housing Equity Fund, a more than $2 billion commitment to preserve and create over 20,000 affordable housing units in Washington State's Puget Sound region; Arlington, Virginia region; and Nashville, Tennessee. Amazon's Housing Equity Fund will help preserve existing housing and help create inclusive housing developments through below-market loans and grants to housing partners, traditional and non-traditional public agencies, and minority-led organizations. She is a cum laude graduate of Spelman College and the Georgetown University Law Center.

Cheryl Cort, Policy Director, Coalition for Smarter Growth

Cheryl Cort is Policy Director for the Coalition for Smarter Growth (CSG), the leading non-profit advocacy organization addressing where and how the Washington, D.C. region grows. She leads CSG's equitable development efforts, working with a broad range of activists, practitioners and officials to promote inclusive, transit-oriented communities. She leads CSG's work with Prince George's activists, and RISE Prince George's, a group supported by CSG, to help realize the TOD potential of the county and build walkable, prosperous and inclusive communities. In DC, she is working to implement the Comprehensive Plan update which she helped shape, and ensure more housing and more affordable housing are built, especially in Rock Creek West (Ward 3). Cheryl holds a B.S. from University of California, Berkeley, and a M.S. in Conservation Biology from University of Maryland, College Park.

Christian Dorsey, Vice-Chair, Arlington County Board

Christian Dorsey was first elected to the Arlington County Board in 2015 and is now serving his second term as Vice-Chair, having previously served as Chair in 2019. Christian is Chair of the Board of Directors of the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments (COG), where he has represented Arlington since 2016. Previously, Mr. Dorsey served as Arlington's Member on the Transportation Planning Board (TPB) in 2019 and 2021.

Additionally, Christian served as a Principal Member of the Board of Directors for the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority, and as a Commissioner on the Northern Virginia Transportation Commission from 2016-2020. Outside of public service, Mr. Dorsey engages as a policy and communications consultant supporting progressive organizations in realizing their missions. Prior to joining the Board, Christian was a senior leader at the Economic Policy Institute, a think tank that promotes economic policies that foster broadly shared prosperity.

Andrew Friedson, Vice President, Montgomery County Council

Andrew Friedson is the District 1 Councilmember representing western and southwestern Montgomery County. He serves on the Planning, Housing, & Economic Development and the Government Operations & Fiscal Policy Committees.

On the Council, he led the effort to add millions in additional funding for affordable housing and critical transportation projects such as the Capital Crescent Trail tunnel in Bethesda and White Flint Metro Station Northern Entrance. As the Council's Lead for Parks, he restored $1.9 million in proposed cuts to our parks system to promote open space and has become a widely respected advocate for livable, walkable communities to improve quality of life.

A longtime volunteer, advocate, and leader with local charities and community-based organizations, Andrew has continued his passionate advocacy for nonprofits while on the Council, and was awarded the 2019 Phyllis Campbell Newsome Public Policy Leadership Award from the Center for Nonprofit Advancement. Prior to joining the Council, Andrew served as senior policy advisor and deputy chief of staff to the Comptroller of Maryland.

Evan Glass, President, Montgomery County Council

Evan Glass has been fighting for the people of Montgomery County for more than 15 years. During that time, he has engaged with all levels of the county, from organizing neighborhood associations and serving as non-profit leader to advocating for small-business growth and championing effective government. When Evan saw that thousands of his neighbors were walking to the Metro on unsafe sidewalks and crosswalks, he helped form the South Silver Spring Neighborhood Association. He successfully advocated for new infrastructure and pedestrian safety initiatives during his six years as president. As housing costs continued to rise, Evan got to work as vice president of the board of Montgomery Housing Partnership. Through his service, he helped create more affordable housing and expand social service programs for low-income communities.

Evan came to the Washington area to attend American University, receiving degrees in journalism and political science. After a 12-year career as a CNN journalist holding Congress accountable, Evan committed his life to building a stronger Montgomery County. Evan lives in Silver Spring with his husband Jason and their two rescue beagles, Daisy and Percy.

Calvin Gladney, President and CEO of Smart Growth America

Calvin Gladney, LEED AP, is President and CEO of Smart Growth America (SGA) and has led community revitalization efforts in dozens of communities around the country as a private consultant, a real estate developer, and as a government official. His work over the last 15 years has been centered on the intersection of land use, transportation, and economic development – all of which will be important in addressing our climate crisis, and our longstanding racial equity issues. Prior to SGA, he was Managing Partner of Mosaic Urban, a real estate advisory services and development firm. In 2017, Mr. Gladney was the Urban Land Institute's Senior Visiting Fellow for Equity. Before establishing Mosaic, he served as VP of the Anacostia Waterfront Corp. (AWC), a D.C. quasi-public agency focused on environmentally-friendly redevelopment.

Mr. Gladney graduated cum laude from Harvard Law School, received his B.S. from Cornell University, and is a LEED Accredited Professional. He is a Trustee of the Urban Land Institute and a Board member of the Low Income Investment Fund (LIIF), and the Center for Community Progress. He is also a member of ULI's national Responsible Property Investment Council (RPIC). In his spare time, Mr. Gladney...Mr. Gladney doesn't have any spare time. But he will

Hans Riemer, former Montgomery County Councilmember

Hans Riemer, first elected to the County Council in 2010, represented one million Montgomery County residents as an At-Large Member.

Hans has dedicated his public service career to creating opportunity for all people to achieve their potential. As a Councilmember, he worked towards this vision by advocating to fund public education and public transportation, early childhood programs, libraries, recreation, human services, housing and economic development. A dedicated environmentalist, Hans works hard to strengthen

Montgomery County's superb rural, suburban and urban areas by placing walkability, public transportation and sustainability at the center of our planning goals.

Before serving on the County Council, Hans established a record as an innovator in political engagement. He served as National Youth Vote Director for the historic Obama for America campaign in 2007, and previously as political director for Rock the Vote, where he helped register nearly a million voters. Hans also served as a senior advisor at AARP and, since his earliest work in Washington, has been a national leader on protecting Social Security from efforts to privatize the program.

Angie Rodgers, Deputy Chief Administrative Officer, Prince George's County

Angie Rodgers currently serves as the Deputy Chief Administrative Officer (DCAO) for Economic Development in the Prince George's County (MD) Office of the County Executive. She is committed to improving how we plan, design, finance, build and support communities that can deliver the same opportunities and benefits to people of all backgrounds, and can specifically move low-income households toward areas of opportunity rather than away from them. Ms. Rodgers spent 17 years working in affordable housing, community and economic development across multiple sectors to advance this goal. In that time, she has provided real estate development, finance, policy, research and advocacy services to organizations throughout the DC metropolitan region and beyond. She has 10 years of experience specifically focused on mixed finance transactions - seven of that directly managing development projects, and over four years underwriting public gap finance requests and overseeing the District of Columbia government's participation in large-scale, multi-phase mixed-income and mixed-use developments.

Senthil Sankaran, Principal, Amazon Housing Equity Fund

As Principal of the Amazon Housing Equity Fund, Senthil is responsible for the deployment and management of Amazon's commitment of over $2 billion in below-market capital, in the form of loans and grants, to preserve and create over 20,000 affordable homes in Amazon's 'hometown' communities: The Puget Sound region of Washington State, the Arlington, VA/Greater Washington region, and Nashville, Tennessee.

Prior to Amazon, Senthil has served in a variety of real estate development leadership roles in both the private and public sectors. As SVP, Real Estate Development & Capital Programs at the District of Columbia Housing Authority (DCHA), Senthil led DCHA's strategic portfolio repositioning and rehabilitation efforts. He also served as Senior Director of Development focused on the Union Market neighborhood in Washington, DC for EDENS – a firm specializing in the acquisition, entitlement and development of mixed-use, urban infill, real estate projects. Prior to EDENS, Senthil served as Director of Real Estate Development for the Government of the District of Columbia in the Office of the Deputy Mayor for Planning & Economic Development (DMPED) where he managed a multi-billion dollar portfolio of large-scale, mixed use, public-private real estate development projects on behalf of the District — most of which required the structuring and deployment of layered public financing tools such as Tax Increment
